Describing people.

To describe a person's body and age, we use to be.

For example,

Gary is tall.
to be + adjective

Aisha is young.
to be + adjective

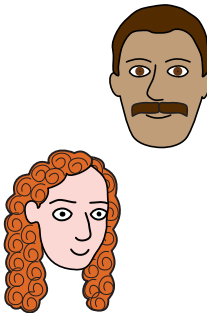

To describe a person's eyes and hair, we use to have.

For example,

Hamid has a moustache.
to have + noun

Clara has curly hair.
to have + adjective + noun

Comparatives and superlatives.

Comparatives and superlatives are used to describe the difference between people or things.

Comparatives.

If an adjective has one syllable, we usually add -er to the adjective and than after the adjective.

For example,

Gary is tall. He is taller than Rashida.
adjective + -er + than

If an adjective has two or more syllables, we usually use more + adjective + than.

For example,

Tony is handsome. He is more handsome than Phil.
more + adjective + than

4. Make these adjectives into comparatives.

- |                   |                 |
|-------------------|-----------------|
| long .....        | dark .....      |

Superlatives.

We use superlatives to compare three or more people or objects. They show which person or object is 'the most' of something.

If an adjective has one syllable, we use the and usually add -est to the adjective.

For example,

the + adjective + -est

If an adjective has two or more syllables, we usually use the + most + adjective.

For example,

Tony is more handsome than Phil and Dennis. Tony is the most handsome.

the + most + adjective
